AN UP-TO-DATER.—Who said Villa was a mere bandit chief?

Press dispatches state that his attack on Matamoras is being delayed because of an accident to an aeroplane he is operating above the besieged city.

That certainly removes him from the Robin Hood class, if anything can.

EDDIE FOY'S KIDS.—If there is any other actor on the stage today who has been more kidded about his family of children than Eddie Foy, step forward and name him. As Jack Johnson would probably say today: "It can't be done."

About one out of every ten or so vaudeville acts carries some remark about Foy's flock with it. The Broadway star and Chicago favorite sure has furnished material for many witty remarks. And, we might add, he has also made many witty remarks. But Eddie leaves it to his brother and sister stage folks to pick kiddingly on his family tree.

And the bully part of it is, Eddie can stand all they hand him. He has a flock of seven children and one wife. All the little Foyes are huskies and they, more or less, all take after their dad.

When a man can make good on the musical comedy stage and raise seven children at the same time—well, we will have to take off our hats to him.

Everybody will keep on kidding him for some time to come. But Eddie isn't worrying. He evidently looks at the joshes the way he does at the family proposition. "The more KIDS the merrier."

SHORT ONES

Only a fool guesses the age of a woman correctly after she passes 18.

The height of impertinence is Florida's orange exhibit at the San Francisco exposition.

With Ireland wet and England dry the population of Ireland will be doubled inside two years.

We are anxiously awaiting to see what brand of grape juice King George intends to advertise.

Some fellows are so self-satisfied that they will boast that they have more dandelions in their front lawn than the neighbors have.

The evidence that peace is near in Europe is accumulating rapidly. Five hundred prominent Londoners have taken the pledge not to drink until the end of the war.

The most discriminating fellow we have encountered recently is a bookseller who put a sign "Recent Fiction" over one table filled with books and over an adjoining table "Decent Fiction."

"KI-YI" — "EVERY DOG HAS HIS DAY" — BUT SOME DAYS ARE WORSE THAN OTHERS.
